Course Description

This symposium features cutting edge lectures, interactive and provocative panel discussions, and an inspiring keynote address by regional and international leaders in the fields of acute care surgery, trauma and surgical critical care.

Target Audience

This course is intended for physicians, nurses, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, prehospital providers and all allied health professionals who care for trauma patients and seek to enhance their understanding of trauma care and treatment options to optimize management of their patients.

Learning Objectives

By the end of this educational offering, participants should be able to:

1. Describe the unique challenges that prehospital and military colleagues experience under austere conditions
2. Understand and apply the principles of hemorrhage control in severely injured and bleeding polytrauma patients
3. Discuss principles of modern trauma and acute care across the spectrum of injuries and critical illness including:
  - a. Thoracic trauma, including ARDS
  - b. Shock (hemorrhagic and cardiogenic)
  - c. Extremity trauma
  - d. TBI, including blunt cerebrovascular injuries
4. Demonstrate key technical skills required in the management of life-threatening hemorrhage

Keynote Speaker

Kenji Inaba, MD, FACS, FRCSC

Dr. Inaba is a Professor of Surgery and Division Chief of Trauma, Surgical Critical Care, and Emergency Surgery at LAC-USC Medical Center. His research interests include resuscitation, novel methods for emergent bleeding control and prehospital lifesaving interventions. He has authored more than 660 peer-reviewed articles and 60 book chapters and is the editor of nine textbooks. Dr. Inaba was born and raised in Canada.
